PREFACE

The materials in this edition of the Canada-United States Law Journal represent over a year and a half of activities sponsored by the Canada-United States Law Institute. In addition to the Institute-sponsored events, Volume Two contains an article prepared by Professor Sidney B. Jacoby concerning a proposal for the modification of the Ontario appellate practice. As the official record of the Institute, the Journal is proud to present in written form the proceedings from three conferences dealing with timely transnational and international legal issues affecting the relationship of Canada and the United States. The Editorial Board of the Journal sincerely hopes that the materials in Volume Two will be of interest to the legal profession in both Canada and the United States.

The first of the three conferences recorded in the Journal deals with the theme of steel dumping into Canada and the United States. This conference was held at the University of Western Ontario during September 1978. Both the Canadian and American antidumping laws are reviewed and critiqued. Comment concerning the current and future trends for steel importation in both countries also is examined.

Taxation of transnational operations in Canada and the United States is the subject of the second conference which was held in April 1978, at the Case Western Reserve University Law School. An analysis of the tax treaty between Canada and the United States is presented. Recent tax developments and issues affecting Canada-United States transnational business activities also is examined. In addition, H. David Rosenbloom, International Tax Counsel, United States Department of Treasury, delivered an address which dealt with current United States foreign tax reform proposals.

The third conference contained in Volume Two concerns the extraterritorial application of United States antitrust law. Although the conference was held in September 1977, this topic is still of current import and occupies a great deal of attention in both Canada and the United States. International licensing of industrial and intellectual property also is examined by this conference.

The Editorial Board would like to express special thanks to Professor Philip Slayton of the University of Western Ontario for his editorial assistance in the preparation of the steel dumping materials.
