January 1997

NAFTA and the Future

Henry T. King Jr.

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarlycommons.law.case.edu/cuslj

Part of the Transnational Law Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarlycommons.law.case.edu/cuslj/vol23/iss/111

This Speech is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Journals at Case Western Reserve University School of Law Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Canada-United States Law Journal by an authorized administrator of Case Western Reserve University School of Law Scholarly Commons.
INTRODUCTION

NAFTA AND THE FUTURE

Henry T. King, Jr.

I wanted to open the session this morning introducing my colleague Sidney Picker. We have had a warm relationship, which had blossomed long ago into a friendship, and I am very proud to present him here today.

Sidney has had a long-term tenure as a professor of international law at the Case Western Reserve Law School. He had worked for the predecessor agency of USTR after his graduation from Dartmouth, Stanford Law School, and Yale Law School. He specializes in international trade, international law, and many other similar areas.

I think we are uniquely appreciative to have him here today because of the fact that he sat on the Chapter 20 panel, which is a very important panel, one of the two panels that existed under this Chapter. So, Sidney made history with other members of the panel and his experience is hands-on, firsthand, and I thought it was very important that we get the benefit of it here today.