PREFACE

The Journal of International Law concludes the celebration of its Tenth Anniversary by proudly announcing the first-ever third issue. Timely in its appearance and provocative in its contents, this special theme issue on World Resources marks a significant growth in the size and output of the Journal. Doubly important is the fact that this issue also contains an addendum to the Journal's earlier issue on Human Rights.

Introductory materials expose the major problems facing developed countries in their attempts to resolve energy issues. An examination of Britain's energy conservation program is also included. Lead articles and student notes are concerned with more specific aspects of the world resource picture. In the Human Rights addenda are three articles dealing with proposed changes in the United Nations Charter, Soviet abuse of psychiatric practices and more widespread use of Esperanto as an international language.

On behalf of the Journal staff, I take this opportunity to express our deep gratitude to Dean Lindsey Cowen, whose personal interest and constant support are in large measure responsible for the Journal's growth this year. Further, I acknowledge my sincere appreciation to all the members of the Volume 10 staff, who made the task of producing three issues more rewarding and more pleasant. To the Editorial Board for Volume 11, I extend best wishes for continued success in the year ahead.

For myself, I would like to draw upon a mariner's prayer and wish each and all of you fair winds and following seas. Good luck and Godspeed.

MIKE J. HOOVER
