EDITOR'S NOTE

On September 28, 2006, the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center sponsored "To Prevent and to Punish: A Conference Commemorating the Sixtieth Anniversary of the Genocide Convention" at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law. The succeeding articles, commentaries, and remarks represent the products of this special conference, and together form the first two issues of the fortieth volume of this publication.

We are honored to be publishing the work of some of the most notable scholars and practitioners in international law in this milestone issue, including: Professor Harry T. King, Jr., Benjamin B. Ferencz, Professor Whitney R. Harris, Professor William A. Schabas, Professor W. Michael Reisman, Juan E. Méndez, Professor Paul R. Williams, Meghan E. Stewart, Professor David Scheffer, Professor David M. Crane, Professor Michael J. Kelly, Robert Petit, Stuart Ford, Neha Jain, Luis Moreno-Ocampo, Christine H. Chung, Professor John Quigley, Judge Ra'id Juhi al-Saedi, and Mikhail Wladimiroff. I thank all of these contributors for their thoughtful and patient work.

Additionally, I thank Professors Michael P. Scharf and Carol Tyler Fox for their unwavering support and guidance as advisors to the Journal. Thanks are also due to Andrew Dorchak, Nancy Pratt, and Alice Hunt for their remarkable support and coordination of our endeavors. I also thank the staff and faculty of the Case Western Reserve School of Law for the innumerable ways they have supported the Journal since its inception. The support of these people has enabled the Journal to help foster academic discourse, and for this we are truly in their debt.

Finally, I would like to thank the 2007–2008 Executive Board and all of our Associate Editors for their conscientious and diligent work. It has been an honor and privilege to work with you all.
