EDITORS' PREFACE

In this final issue of Volume 20, the Editors have once again placed emphasis on our nation's urban crisis and the legislative and legal approaches which are being developed to ease the social and economic problems of the inner city resident. The two Lead Articles in this issue are concerned with housing partnerships and the federal rent supplement program. The student Note relates to another aspect of the urban crisis, namely, the problems of encouraging corporate involvement in the ghetto and the tax incentives which are being made available to stimulate such involvement. The Comment in this issue discusses air pollution and the role played by the air quality control regions established recently by the National Air Pollution Control Administration.

The Editors are pleased to announce the names of those who will comprise the editorial staff for Volume 21 during the coming year. They are as follows:

William B. Lawrence
