

Faculty Publications

2023

Power Shift: The Return of the Uniting for Peace Resolution

Michael P. Scharf

Case Western Reserve University - School of Law, michael.scharf@case.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarlycommons.law.case.edu/faculty_publications

 Part of the International Law Commons

Repository Citation

Scharf, Michael P., "Power Shift: The Return of the Uniting for Peace Resolution" (2023). Faculty Publications. 2153.

https://scholarlycommons.law.case.edu/faculty_publications/2153

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by Case Western Reserve University School of Law Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Faculty Publications by an authorized administrator of Case Western Reserve University School of Law Scholarly Commons.

POWER SHIFT: THE RETURN OF THE UNITING FOR PEACE RESOLUTION

*Michael P. Scharf

ABSTRACT

In 2022, the United States dusted off the 1950 Uniting for Peace Resolution in order to obtain General Assembly condemnation of the Russian invasion of Ukraine. This was the first time in three decades that the Security Council and General Assembly had utilized the Uniting for Peace mechanism – a process designed to end-run a Security Council veto. Together with the General Assembly’s creation of the international investigative mechanism for Syria in 2016 over Russia’s objection, the use of the Uniting for Peace process to condemn Russia’s aggression represented a shift in power away from the Security Council and to the General Assembly, with potentially broad and long-term implications. This article examines the causes and consequences of that power shift.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT.....	1
TABLE OF CONTENTS	1
I. INTRODUCTION	2
II. THE HISTORY OF THE UNITING FOR PEACE RESOLUTION.....	4
A. Security Council Deadlock During the Cold War	4
B. The Creation and Uses of the Uniting for Peace Resolution	6
III. IS THE UNITING FOR PEACE RESOLUTION STILL RELEVANT TODAY?	11
A. The General Assembly’s Creation of the IIM	12
B. Humanitarian Intervention: The Bombing of the Syrian Chemical Weapons Facilities	17
C. Russia’s 2022 Invasion of Ukraine: Reemergence of the Uniting for Peace Resolution	21
IV. CONCLUSION.....	27

* Michael P. Scharf is Co-Dean of the Law School and the Joseph C. Hostetler — Baker Hostetler Professor of Law at Case Western Reserve University. He is also President of the American Branch of the International Law Association and Co-Founder of the Public International Law & Policy Group, a Nobel Peace Prize-nominated NGO. During the elder Bush and Clinton Administrations, Scharf served as Attorney Adviser for U.N. Affairs at the U.S. Department of State.

I. INTRODUCTION

After the disintegration of the Soviet Union in 1991, foreign policy experts optimistically declared that the world had entered the “post-cold war age.”¹ Within the U.N. Security Council, it was a period of unprecedented collaboration and accomplishment.² In the few years that followed, the U.N. Security Council adopted more Chapter VII resolutions, condemning international law violations, establishing peace-keeping forces, imposing sanctions, authorizing force, establishing No Fly Zones and Safe Areas, and creating investigative commissions and international criminal tribunals, than in the preceding five decades since the creation of the United Nations.³ But, with the onset of the Syrian conflict and rising tensions between China and the United States, by 2012 that began to change.⁴

During the Syrian conflict, Russia vetoed thirteen Security Council Resolutions that would have condemned the Syrian government’s atrocities, created a commission to investigate Syria’s use of chemical weapons, and referred the matter to the International Criminal Court.⁵ In this context, the Guardian newspaper reported in 2015 that “[t]he United States has warned that Russia’s continued blanket use of its UN veto will jeopardize the [S]ecurity [C]ouncil’s long-term legitimacy and could lead the U.S. and like-minded countries to bypass it as a decision-making body.”⁶ As the U.S. Permanent Representative to the UN told the Guardian: “It’s a Darwinian universe here. If a particular body reveals itself to be dysfunctional, then people are going to go elsewhere.”⁷ That threat became reality in December 2016 when the General Assembly, acting unilaterally, created the International

-
1. See generally CHARLES WILLIAM MAYNES & WILLIAM G. HAYLAND, THE NATURE OF THE POST-COLD WAR WORLD 5, 23-29 (1993), https://www.globalsecurity.org/military/library/report/1993/ssi_maynes-hyland.pdf [<https://perma.cc/6Z8X-6NN3>].
 2. See KENNETH MANUSAMA, THE UNITED NATIONS SECURITY COUNCIL IN THE POST-COLD WAR ERA: APPLYING THE PRINCIPLE OF LEGALITY 2-3 (2006).
 3. See generally id. at 2.
 4. See generally MICHAEL P. SCHARF ET AL., THE SYRIAN CONFLICT’S IMPACT ON INTERNATIONAL LAW 1 (2020).
 5. Id. at 91-92.
 6. Julian Borger & Bastien Inzaurrealde, Russian Vetoes Are Putting UN Security Council’s Legitimacy at Risk, says US, THE GUARDIAN (Sept. 23, 2015, 6:15 AM), <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2015/sep/23/russian-vetoes-putting-un-security-council-legitimacy-at-risk-says-us> [<https://perma.cc/M6E5-X7EU>].
 7. Id.

Impartial and Independent Investigative Mechanism to document Syrian atrocities and prepare case files for prosecution.⁸

In February 2022, Russia's massive invasion of neighboring Ukraine ushered in a full-on return of the Cold War.⁹ The invasion and international response were described as "a major breaking point in history."¹⁰ Five days after the invasion, 11 members of the UN Security Council adopted a U.S.-drafted Resolution invoking the authority of the 1950 "Uniting for Peace" Resolution¹¹ and calling for a special session of the UN General Assembly to take action to respond to Russia's aggression in circumvention of Russia's veto at the Security Council.¹² At that special session, on March 2, the U.N. General Assembly adopted Resolution ES-11/1 by a vote of 141 in favor, 5 opposed, and 35 abstentions.¹³ The Resolution characterized Russia's action as "aggression . . . in violation of Article 2 (4) of the Charter" and demanded that Russia "immediately, completely and unconditionally withdraw all of its military forces from the territory of Ukraine within its internationally recognized borders."¹⁴

This was the first time in three decades that the Security Council and General Assembly had utilized the "Uniting for Peace" procedure – a process designed to end-run a Security Council veto.¹⁵ Together with

-
8. SCHARF ET AL., supra note 4, at 92-93.
 9. See, e.g., Travis Andersen, Does Russia's Invasion of Ukraine Signal the Start of a New Cold War? Foreign Policy Specialists Weigh In, BOS. GLOBE, <https://www.bostonglobe.com/2022/03/02/metro/does-russias-invasion-ukraine-signal-start-new-cold-war-foreign-policy-specialists-weigh/> (Mar. 2, 2022, 2:10 PM) [<https://perma.cc/WT96-NZKA>]; Elliot Abrams, The New Cold War, COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELS. (Mar. 4, 2022, 7:36 AM), <https://www.cfr.org/blog/new-cold-war-0> [perma.cc/4Y36-RF79]. Author Elliot Abrams served as President George W. Bush's Deputy National Security Advisor for Global Democracy Strategy. See also John Simpson, Ukraine Invasion: Is This a New Cold War, Asks John Simpson, BBC (Feb. 24, 2022), <https://www.bbc.com/news/world-europe-60515342> [<https://perma.cc/7A4M-96H8>]. The author, John Simpson, is BBC's World Affairs Editor.
 10. Dan De Luce, A New Cold War Without Rules: U.S. Braces for a Long-term Confrontation with Russia, NBC NEWS (Mar. 6, 2022, 4:30 AM), <https://www.nbcnews.com/news/investigations/new-cold-war-rules-us-braces-long-term-confrontation-russia-rcna18554> (quoting Mary Elise Sarotte, professor of history at the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies) [<https://perma.cc/D86F-JLWS>].
 11. See G.A. Res. 377 (V), Uniting for Peace (Nov. 3, 1950).
 12. See S.C. Res. 2623 (Feb. 27, 2022).
 13. See G.A. Res. ES-11/1 (Mar. 2, 2022) (opposing states were Belarus, North Korea, Eritrea, Russia and Syria).
 14. Id. ¶¶ 2, 4.
 15. LUISA BLANCHFIELD & MATTHEW C. WEED, CONG. RSCH. SERV., IN11876, UNITED NATIONS SECURITY COUNCIL AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESPONSES TO THE RUSSIAN INVASION OF UKRAINE 1-2 (2022).

the General Assembly's creation of the IIIM in 2016, the use of the Uniting for Peace process to condemn Russia's aggression in 2022 represented a shift in power away from the Security Council and to the General Assembly, with potentially broad and long-term implications.¹⁶

This article examines the causes and consequences of that power shift. First it surveys the history of the adoption of the Uniting for Peace Resolution and its historic uses. Next, it explores the UN General Assembly's creation of the IIIM and the adoption of Resolution ES-11/1, focusing on the reinterpretation of the U.N. Charter reflected by those developments. Finally, it analyzes the likely legal and institutional consequences of these developments.

II. THE HISTORY OF THE UNITING FOR PEACE RESOLUTION

A. Security Council Deadlock During the Cold War

After the failure of the League of Nations, which only lasted from 1920 to 1945,¹⁷ the countries that negotiated the UN Charter in San Francisco in May-June 1945 formed the new organization around a potent Security Council, made up of the five most powerful States—the Permanent Members¹⁸—and a handful of others elected on a rotating basis. While the General Assembly would include every member of the organization with an equal vote, the Security Council would have the primary responsibility within the UN system for the maintenance of international peace and security, as well as enforcement of international law.¹⁹

As the price demanded for their support of the new organization,²⁰ the Permanent Members were accorded a veto over all substantive matters before the Security Council.²¹ The delegates at San Francisco granted the veto power to the Permanent Five because of “a tremendous amount of confidence in the certainty that the veto shall not be applied except in exceptional cases.”²² But that confidence was

-
16. See id.; SCHARF ET AL., supra note 4, at 92-93.
 17. ‘The League is Dead. Long Live the United Nations,’ NAT’L WWII MUSEUM (Apr. 19, 2021), <https://www.nationalww2museum.org/war/articles/league-of-nations> [<https://perma.cc/R4VQ-PQHH>].
 18. The Permanent Members of the Security Council are China (originally Nationalist China and now the People’s Republic of China), France, the Soviet Union (now Russia), the United Kingdom, and the United States. See Current Members, UNITED NATIONS, <https://www.un.org/securitycouncil/content/current-members> (last visited Oct. 5, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/JW3H-HGMF>].
 19. U.N. Charter arts. 41-42, 94.
 20. Joseph M. Isanga, Resurgent Cold War and U.N Security Council Reform Opportunities, 47 DENV. J. INT’L L. 73, 83 (2019).
 21. U.N. Charter art. 27.
 22. U.N. SCOR, 3d Comm’n, 5th mtg. at 165, U.N Doc. 1150 (June 15, 1945).

misplaced. The creation of the United Nations corresponded with the dawn of the Cold War.²³ It was a period marked by gridlock in the Security Council, which was prevented by the Permanent Member veto from intervening to halt atrocities and bloodshed in a variety of conflict areas around the world.²⁴ During the Cold War period, the Soviet Union vetoed 122 Resolutions, the United States vetoed 80, Britain vetoed 32, France vetoed 20, while China vetoed none.²⁵

Security Council deadlock during the Cold War went through two phases. In the first, 1946 to 1965, when most of the members of the United Nations were West-leaning States, the Soviet Union vetoed 106 resolutions, while the United States vetoed none.²⁶ In the second phase, 1966 to 1989, during which a number of former colonies joined the United Nations as newly independent States, the United States vetoed 67 Security Council Resolutions, most related to Israel, while the Soviet Union vetoed just 13.²⁷

The frequent use of the veto, especially in cases where U.N. action could halt humanitarian disasters, has eroded the legitimacy of the United Nations Security Council. Over the years there have been numerous proposals to amend the UN Charter to make it more difficult for the Permanent Five to exercise their veto power.²⁸ But Charter amendment requires the consent of the Permanent Five, so all proposals that would weaken the veto have been met with their opposition and have gone nowhere, leading scholars to decry that the “veto is essentially immune from reform.”²⁹

-
23. Coined by George Orwell in 1945, the term “Cold War” has been used to describe the open yet restricted rivalry that developed after World War II between the United States and the Soviet Union and their respective allies. The Cold War was waged from 1945 to 1991 on political, economic, and propaganda fronts with fighting confined to conventional weapons between proxy nations and insurgent groups. Cold War International Politics, BRITANNICA, <https://www.britannica.com/event/Cold-War> (Aug. 23, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/NNT4-FVZB>].
 24. Jan Wouters & Tom Ruys, Security Council Reform: A New Veto for a New Century? 16 (Egmont Inst., Working Paper No. 78, 2005).
 25. Isanga, supra note 20, at 89.
 26. Id.
 27. Id.
 28. See Frederic L. Kirgis, Jr., The Security Council’s First Fifty Years, 89 AM. J. INT’L L. 506, 510-11 (1995); Richard Butler, Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered: Repairing the Security Council, 78 FOREIGN AFF., Sept.–Oct. 1999, at 9, 9–11; David D. Caron, The Legitimacy of the Collective Authority of the Security Council, 87 AM. J. INT’L L. 552, 555–56 (1993).
 29. Caron, supra note 28, at 569.

B. The Creation and Uses of the Uniting for Peace Resolution

At the height of the Cold War, the Uniting for Peace Resolution was created to enable the General Assembly to act quickly in an international crisis in the face of Security Council paralysis due to a Permanent Member veto. The brainchild of the United States, the Resolution was adopted by the General Assembly on November 3, 1950 in response to the Soviet Union's veto of resolutions addressing North Korea's aggression against South Korea.³⁰

In June 1950, the Security Council had initially authorized Members of the United Nations to "furnish such assistance to the Republic of Korea as may be necessary to repel the armed attack and to restore international peace and security in the area."³¹ That resolution was not vetoed by the Soviet Union—an ally of North Korea³²—because at the time the Soviet Union was boycotting the meetings of the Security Council in an effort to compel the Council to seat the communist Government of Beijing rather than the nationalist Government of Taiwan as China.³³ This turned out to be an enormous diplomatic blunder since the other members of the Council and later the International Court of Justice³⁴ took the position that being absent was not the same as a non-concurring vote for purposes of exercising the Permanent Member veto.³⁵ When the Soviet delegation returned to the Security Council in August 1950, it voted against a United States draft resolution condemning the continued defiance of the United Nations by the North Korean authorities.³⁶ In order to overcome this impasse, the United States proposed that the General Assembly adopt the Uniting for Peace Resolution.³⁷ The United States knew that this would dilute the power of its veto, but up to that point in time it had

30. Christian Tomuschat, Uniting for Peace, UNITED NATIONS AUDIOVISUAL LIBR. INT'L L. 1, 1 (2008).

31. Id.

32. Dave Roos, Why Did Stalin Support the Start of the Korean War?, HIST. (Apr. 4, 2022), <https://www.history.com/news/korean-war-stalin-soviet-union> [<https://perma.cc/AB84-YGDB>].

33. Tomuschat, supra note 30.

34. Legal Consequences for States of the Continued Presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) Notwithstanding Security Council Resolution 276 (1970), Advisory Opinion, 1971 I.C.J. 16, ¶ 22 (June 21).

35. U.N. Charter art. 27, ¶ 3 ("Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members").

36. Tomuschat, supra note 30.

37. Id.

never used the veto and viewed the continued authorization to fight the Korean War as a more important consideration.³⁸

The Uniting for Peace Resolution allows the General Assembly to immediately consider matters in which the Security Council has failed to perform its duty to maintain international peace and security due to the use of the veto.³⁹ The General Assembly can consider such matters when asked by a majority of the members of the Security Council, a procedure not subject to the veto, or upon its own decision to take up the matter with a two-thirds vote.⁴⁰ If the Assembly is not in session, the Uniting for Peace process allows it to convene an emergency session.⁴¹ Then, with an affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of members present, the General Assembly may issue recommendations it deems necessary in order to restore international peace and security.⁴²

In its initial use of this authority, on February 1, 1951, the General Assembly adopted Resolution 498(V), calling upon states to support continued UN military action in Korea, including to repel Chinese aggression.⁴³ To date, this is the only time the General Assembly has called for use of force under the Uniting for Peace Resolution.⁴⁴ There is scholarly debate, however, about whether the 1951 General Assembly Resolution was based on the underlying right of collective self-defense, merely constituted a confirmation of an existing Security Council authorization to use force or represented an independent authorization to take enforcement measures.⁴⁵

-
38. See U.N. GAOR, 5th Sess., 299th plen. mtg. at 294, ¶¶ 37-38, UN Doc. A/PV.299 (Nov. 1, 1950).
39. G.A. Res. 377 (V), supra note 11, ¶ 1 (“[I]f the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, fails to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in any case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression, the General Assembly shall consider the matter immediately with a view to making appropriate recommendations to Members for collective measures, including in the case of a breach of the peace or act of aggression the use of armed force when necessary, to maintain or restore international peace and security. If not in session at the time, the General Assembly shall therefore meet in emergency special session within twenty-four hours of the request. Such emergency special session may be called if requested by the Security Council on the vote of any seven members [nine since 1965], or by a majority of the Members of the United Nations.”)
40. Id. ¶¶ 1, 3.
41. Id. ¶ 1.
42. Id. ¶¶ 1, 3.
43. G.A. Res. 498 (V), ¶¶ 1-4 (Feb. 1, 1951).
44. Cf. Michael Ramsden, Uniting for MH17, 7 ASIAN J. INT’L L. 337, 352-53 (2017).
45. Larry D. Johnson, Uniting for Peace: Does it Still Serve any Useful Purpose?, 108 AM. J. INT’L L. UNBOUND 106, 111-12 (2014).

The Uniting for Peace Resolution was next used in 1956 when Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal, prompting Britain, France, and Israel to attack Egypt with the objective to regain western control of the Canal and remove the Egyptian President from power.⁴⁶ The U.K. and France vetoed Security Council resolutions mandating the immediate withdrawal of armed forces.⁴⁷ Invoking the Uniting for Peace Resolution, the United States called for an emergency Special Session of the General Assembly.⁴⁸ The Assembly convened and adopted Resolution 997,⁴⁹ calling for an immediate ceasefire and withdrawal of all foreign forces, an arms embargo, the reopening of the Suez Canal, and the placement of U.N. peacekeeping forces to monitor the situation.⁵⁰ Within a week of the Resolution's adoption, Britain and France withdrew their armed forces.⁵¹

General Assembly Resolution 997 demonstrated that the General Assembly could take up a matter that the Security Council had been debating despite Article 12 of the U.N. Charter.⁵² That article states that “while the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.”⁵³ In the 2004 Construction of a Wall Case, the International Court of Justice confirmed that the interpretation of Article 12 has evolved through state practice, and that there was no bar “for the General Assembly to deal in parallel with the same matter [as the Security Council] concerning the maintenance of international peace and security.”⁵⁴

General Assembly Resolution 997 also indicated the wide panoply of powers that could be exercised by the General Assembly under the Uniting for Peace Resolution which were traditionally viewed as belonging exclusively to the Security Council.⁵⁵ Importantly, neither

46. Asian Udoh, Case Study: Invoking the ‘Uniting for Peace’ Resolution of 1950 to Authorize the Use of Humanitarian Military Interventions and Prevent Mass Atrocities in Syria, 23 WILLAMETTE J. INT’L L. & DISP. RESOL. 187, 211 (2015).

47. Id.

48. Id.

49. G.A. Res. 997 (ES-I) (November 2, 1956).

50. Udoh, supra note 46.

51. Id.

52. Id. at 211-12.

53. U.N. Charter art. 12, ¶ 1.

54. Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Advisory Opinion, 2004 I.C.J. 138, ¶ 27 (July 18).

55. See G.A. Res. 997 (ES-I), supra note 49.

General Assembly Resolution 997 nor any subsequent General Assembly Resolution invoking the Uniting for Peace Resolution has authorized force or enforcement action.⁵⁶

Under the U.N. Charter, the General Assembly can only “recommend” use of force, not “authorize” it as the Security Council is empowered to do.⁵⁷ This is significant because Article 2(4) of the U.N. Charter prohibits use of force except in self-defense or when authorized by the Security Council.⁵⁸ In the “Certain Expenses” advisory opinion of 1962, the International Court of Justice noted that under the U.N. Charter, only the Security Council can authorize enforcement by coercive action against an aggressor.⁵⁹ This suggests that the Uniting for Peace Resolution can only be used to call for use of force in a situation in which the U.N. Charter would permit collective self-defense to respond to an armed attack.⁶⁰ However, some scholars argue that a General Assembly recommendation for use of force under the Uniting for Peace process can have the same legal effect as a Security Council authorization because the prohibition on the use of force binds members and not the United Nations organization.⁶¹ Thus, where the organization delegates authority to use force through a recommendation, such force will not run afoul of the Article 2(4) prohibition.⁶²

From its first use in 1951 to 2022, the Uniting for Peace Resolution had been invoked only eleven other times -- seven times at the request of a majority of members of the Security Council and five times unilaterally by the General Assembly. In each case, the General Assembly recommended non-use of force measures, such as: establishing a consensual peace keeping force in the Suez Canal in 1950, establishing a commission of inquiry in Hungary in 1956, calling for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Jordan and Lebanon in 1958, calling for an embargo of weapons to the Congo in 1960, calling for the rescission by Israel of unilateral measures in Jerusalem in 1967, providing assistance to East Pakistani refugees in 1971, calling for the withdrawal of foreign troops from Afghanistan in 1980, calling for the withdrawal of Israel

56. Id.; see also Johnson, supra note 45.

57. Tomuschat, supra note 30.

58. U.N. Charter arts. 42, 51.

59. Certain Expenses of the United Nations (Article 17, Paragraph 2, of the Charter), Advisory Opinion, 1962 I.C.J. 151, 163 (July 20).

60. See U.N. Charter art. 51.

61. Andrew J. Carswell, Unblocking the UN Security Council: The Uniting for Peace Resolution, 18 J. CONFLICT & SEC. L. 453, 461 (2013); Ved P. Nanda, The Security Council Veto in the Context of Atrocity Crimes, Unity for Peace, and the Responsibility to Protect, 52 CASE W. RESV. J. INT'L L. 119, 139-40 (2020).

62. Carswell, supra note 61; Nanda, supra note 61.

from territories occupied since 1967 in 1980, condemning South Africa for the occupation of Namibia and calling for assistance to the liberation struggle in 1981, calling on members to apply sanctions on Israel in 1982, and requesting an advisory opinion of the ICJ on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the occupied Palestinian territory in 1997.⁶³

The Soviet Union considered the Uniting for Peace mechanism to be an illegitimate usurpation by the General Assembly of powers reserved to the Security Council.⁶⁴ It therefore refused to pay its assessed share for the peacekeeping forces authorized by the General Assembly for the Middle East in 1958 and Congo in 1960.⁶⁵ In an advisory opinion that has been described “as a paradigm shift in the character of the UN,”⁶⁶ the International Court of Justice determined that the expenses for the peacekeeping forces created by the General Assembly under the Uniting for Peace process were expenses of the organization that the Soviet Union was obligated to pay.⁶⁷ In so doing, the Court confirmed the power of the General Assembly to authorize peacekeeping forces with the consent of the territorial state, saying that the power of the Security Council to take action to maintain or restore international peace and security “is primary, not exclusive.”⁶⁸ To support its opinion, the International Court of Justice articulated a broad approach to the implied powers doctrine, noting that “when the Organization takes action which warrants the assertion that it was appropriate for the fulfilment of one of the stated purposes of the United Nations, the presumption is that such action is not ultra vires the Organization.”⁶⁹

-
63. Security Council Deadlocks and Uniting for Peace: An Abridged History, SEC. COUNCIL REP., https://www.securitycouncilreport.org/atf/cf/%7B65BFCF9B-6D27-4E9C-8CD3-CF6E4FF96FF9%7D/Security_Council_Deadlocks_and_Uniting_for_Peace.pdf (last visited Dec. 16, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/796V-LFFD>]; see also Johnson, supra note 45.
64. See generally Tomuschat, supra note 30.
65. RICHARD L. WORSNOP, UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING 3 (1964), <https://library.cqpress.com/cqresearcher/document.php?id=cqresrr1964081900>.
66. Laishram Malem Mangal, Case Commentary on Certain Expenses of the United Nations Advisory Opinion of 20 July 1962 1 (July 2020) (unpublished comment), https://www.researchgate.net/publication/342719409_Case_Commentary_Certain_expenses_of_the_United_Nations_Advisory_Opinion_of_20_July_1962-converted [<https://perma.cc/5FX7-VSKC>].
67. Certain Expenses of the United Nations (Article 17, Paragraph 2, of the Charter), Advisory Opinion, 1962 I.C.J. 151, 163 (July 20).
68. Id.
69. Id. at 168.

III. IS THE UNITING FOR PEACE RESOLUTION STILL RELEVANT TODAY?

Until the 2022 Ukraine crisis, the Security Council had not referred any matter under the Uniting for Peace procedure since 1982, and the General Assembly had not unilaterally invoked it since 1997.⁷⁰ Professor Christian Tomuschat⁷¹ believes this reluctance reflected concern that the Uniting for Peace Resolution “has a potential that could subvert the well-equilibrated balance of power within the United Nations.”⁷² This concern led the Soviet Union and later Russia to continuously object to the Resolution as authorizing the General Assembly to act in an ultra vires manner.⁷³ Meanwhile, after the Uniting for Peace Resolution was used in 1967, 1980, 1982, and 1997 to condemn and recommend sanctions against Israel, the United States soured on its utility. These concerns explain the dearth of times the Resolution has been invoked, and the length of time that transpired since its last use and 2022.

Moreover, Larry Johnson, former Deputy Legal Counsel of the United Nations,⁷⁴ has argued that the Uniting for Peace Resolution is no longer needed.⁷⁵ He points out that since the General Assembly is now in session year-round, the Uniting for Peace Resolution is not necessary to call a special session.⁷⁶ He notes that the International Court of Justice confirmed in the Wall case that there is no bar to the General Assembly taking up a matter of which the Security Council is seized with or without invoking the Uniting for Peace Resolution.⁷⁷ He argues that since the General Assembly has exercised the powers of the Uniting for Peace Resolution a number of times without invoking the Resolution, such as in calling for voluntary sanctions, the Resolution is not a necessary predicate to such action.⁷⁸ With respect to the General

70. Nanda, supra note 61, at 141.

71. Professor Tomuschat is a professor emeritus of Humboldt University Berlin. See U.N. Audiovisual Library of International Law, Mr. Christian Tomuschat Biography, <https://legal.un.org/avl/pdf/ha/notewriters/tomuschat.pdf> (last visited Dec. 19, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/ZH7T-LNMU>].

72. Tomuschat, supra note 30.

73. See Udoh, supra note 46, at 217.

74. Larry Johnson served as the Assistant-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs from 2006-2008 (Deputy Legal Counsel of the UN). See U.N. Audiovisual Library of International Law, Mr. Larry D. Johnson Biography, https://legal.un.org/avl/pdf/ls/Johnson_bio.pdf (last visited Dec. 19, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/KM46-8ZQV>].

75. Johnson, supra note 45, at 115.

76. Id.

77. Id.

78. Id.

Assembly recommending the use of force pursuant to the Uniting for Peace resolution, Johnson argues that the Assembly can do so only within the limited context of supporting the exercise by States of their inherent right to individual or collective self-defense under Article 51 of the Charter.⁷⁹

A. The General Assembly's Creation of the IIIM

The Cold War began its return eight years before the Russian invasion of Ukraine, stemming from events in Syria, a close ally of Russia. Despite significant evidence of atrocity crimes being committed in the ongoing civil war in Syria — particularly by government forces — the UN Security Council was paralyzed by the Russian veto, unable to take any steps towards accountability.⁸⁰ In May 2014, Russia vetoed a Security Council resolution that would have referred the situation in Syria to the International Criminal Court.⁸¹ Later, Russia vetoed a Security Council resolution that would have established an investigative mechanism to document Syrian use of chemical weapons and other atrocities.⁸² In all, Russia vetoed 13 resolutions to prevent accountability of the Syrian government since the outbreak of the Syrian civil war.⁸³

In contrast, in the 1990s the Security Council first condemned atrocities in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, then established an investigative commission to document them, and finally created ad hoc tribunals to prosecute the perpetrators.⁸⁴ Also, ten years later, the

79. Id.

80. See Ambassador Richard Mills, Deputy U.S. Representative to the U.N., Remarks at a UN General Assembly Meeting Following Russia's Veto of a UN Security Council Resolution on the Syria Cross-Border Humanitarian Mechanism (July 21, 2022), <https://usun.usmission.gov/remarks-at-a-un-general-assembly-meeting-following-russias-veto-of-a-un-security-council-resolution-on-the-syria-cross-border-humanitarian-mechanism/> [<https://perma.cc/LB3S-MHHV>].

81. Ian Black, Russia and China Veto UN Move to Refer Syria to International Criminal Court, THE GUARDIAN (May 22, 2014), <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2014/may/22/russia-china-veto-un-draft-resolution-refer-syria-international-criminal-court>. [<https://perma.cc/HGL8-X72K>].

82. Russia's 12 UN Vetoes on Syria, RTE, <https://www.rte.ie/news/world/2018/0411/953637-russia-syria-un-veto/> (Apr. 11, 2018, 7:47 PM) [<https://perma.cc/AQ4W-UGMZ>].

83. Id.

84. See generally Milena Sterio, The Yugoslavia and Rwanda Tribunals: A Legacy of Human Rights Protection and Contribution to International Criminal Justice, in THE LEGACY OF AD HOC TRIBUNALS IN INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL LAW 11, 11 (Milena Sterio & Michael Scharf eds., 2019).

Security Council referred the situations in The Sudan and Libya to the ICC for prosecution.⁸⁵ But in Syria, the Security Council could do absolutely nothing. This led the United States Representative to bluntly declare: “The United States is disgusted that a couple of members of this Council continue to prevent us from fulfilling our sole purpose here, which is to address an ever-deepening crisis in Syria and a growing threat to regional peace and security. For months, this Council has been held hostage by a couple of members.”⁸⁶

Enter Liechtenstein’s U.N. Ambassador Christian Wenaweser,⁸⁷ who had formerly served as President of the International Criminal Court’s Assembly of State Parties. In the fall of 2016, Ambassador Wenaweser hatched a bold plan for an end-run around the Security Council that did not involve invoking the disfavored Uniting for Peace Resolution. For months, Wenaweser canvassed UN Delegates, arguing that “[w]e have postponed any meaningful action on accountability too often and for too long.”⁸⁸ Commenting on the outsized role Wenaweser played, Harvard Law Professor Alex Whiting⁸⁹ writes, “the short history of international criminal justice, from Nuremberg to the present, is full of heroic individuals and their improbable and creative ideas that have pushed the project forward.”⁹⁰

Galvanized by Ambassador Wenaweser’s efforts, on December 21, 2016, the United Nations General Assembly took a historic step in establishing a mechanism to investigate and preserve evidence of international crimes in Syria.⁹¹ This was the first time the Assembly has established such a body.⁹² Despite objection by Russia, the General

-
85. Press Release, Security Council, Security Council Refers Situation in Darfur, Sudan, to Prosecutor of International Criminal Court, U.N. Press Release SC/8351 (March 31, 2005); Libya, INT’L CRIM. CT., <https://www.icc-cpi.int/libya> (last visited Dec. 20, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/R6G5-DTPL>].
 86. U.N. SCOR, 67th Sess., 6711th mtg. at 5, U.N. Doc. S/PV.6711 (Feb. 4, 2012).
 87. Ambassador Wenaweser has been the Permanent Representative of Liechtenstein to the United Nations since 2002. Ambassador Christian Wenaweser, INT’L CT. FOR TRANSITIONAL JUST., <https://www.ictj.org/about/ambassador-christian-wenaweser> (last visited Oct. 21, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/C36V-UZQ8>].
 88. Michelle Nichols, U.N. Creates Team to Prepare Cases on Syria War Crimes, REUTERS, <https://www.reuters.com/article/us-mideast-crisis-syria-warcrimes-idUSKBN14A2H7?il=0> (Dec. 21, 2016, 6:20 PM) [<https://perma.cc/VXH8-6Y7T>].
 89. Alex Whiting, HARV. L. SCH., <https://hls.harvard.edu/faculty/alex-whiting/> (last visited Oct. 1, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/2ZQ6-WVBC>].
 90. Alex Whiting, An Investigative Mechanism for Syria: The General Assembly Steps Into the Breach, 15 J. INT’L CRIM. JUST. 231, 236 (2017).
 91. See G.A. Res. 71/248, ¶ 4 (Dec. 21, 2016).
 92. Whiting, supra note 90, at 231.

Assembly adopted Resolution 71/248 by a vote of 105 to 15 with 52 abstentions, creating the International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism to Assist in the Investigation and Prosecution of Those Responsible for the Most Serious Crimes under International Law Committed in the Syrian Arab Republic since March 2011, known in shorthand as the IIIM.⁹³

The IIIM is empowered to collect evidence from other bodies including the Independent International Commission of Inquiry established by the Human Rights Council, and to conduct its own investigations “including interviews, witness testimony, documentation and forensic material.”⁹⁴ The General Assembly resolution directs the IIIM to analyze the collected evidence and prepare files of evidence that could be provided to “national, regional or international courts or tribunals that have or may in the future have jurisdiction over these crimes, in accordance with international law.”⁹⁵

This was the first time in history that the General Assembly established an investigative body to assemble and analyze evidence of international crimes for the purpose of preserving evidence for future international or domestic trials.⁹⁶ The IIIM’s authority to do so was questioned by Russia. During the debate on the resolution and subsequently in a note-verbale dated February 8, 2017, the Russian Government complained that “the General Assembly acted ultra vires — going beyond its powers as specified” in the UN Charter.⁹⁷ Specifically, Russia argued that:

[A] number of powers vested in the mechanism under [R]esolution 71/248, including those of “analys[ing] evidence” and “prepar[ing] files,” are prosecutorial in nature. However, prosecutions, criminal investigations and support of criminal investigations are not

-
93. Press Release, General Assembly, General Assembly Takes Action on Second Committee Reports by Adopting 37 Texts, U.N. Press Release GA/11880 (Dec. 21, 2016); see also G.A. Res. 71/248, supra note 91, ¶ 4.
94. U.N. Secretary-General, Report of the Secretary General on the Implementation of the Resolution Establishing the International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism to Assist in the Investigation and Prosecution of Persons Responsible for the Most Serious Crimes Under International Law Committed in the Syrian Arab Republic Since March 2011, ¶ 12, U.N. Doc. S/71/755 (Jan. 19, 2017) [hereinafter Report on Implementation of IIIM].
95. U.N. GAOR, 71st Sess., 48th mtg., ¶ 4, U.N. Doc. A/71/L.48 (Dec. 19, 2016).
96. See, e.g., Whiting, supra note 90, at 232.
97. U.N. Secretary-General, Note Verbale Dated 8 February 2017 from the Permanent Mission of the Russian Federation to the United Nations Addressed to the Secretary-General, U.N. Doc. A/71/793 (Feb. 14, 2017).

among the functions of the General Assembly. It cannot create an organ that has more powers than the General Assembly itself.⁹⁸

There was a time when it was not settled whether the Security Council, itself, had the power to establish a prosecutorial institution, let alone whether the General Assembly could do so.⁹⁹ But that question was answered in the affirmative by the Appeals Chamber of the Yugoslavia Tribunal in 1995 based on the extraordinary powers vested in the Security Council under Chapter VII of the UN Charter to maintain international peace and security.¹⁰⁰ The General Assembly has much more limited powers, and they do not include the power to prosecute international crimes.¹⁰¹ Yet, it is not clear that the powers of the IIM are “prosecutorial in nature” in the sense that they entail the prosecution of individuals, a power that could only be conferred by the Security Council.¹⁰² Rather, the resolution and Secretary General’s report describe a “prosecutorial” body only in respect to the standards that will be adopted by the IIM when collecting and analyzing evidence.¹⁰³ If one views the IIM not as a sort of investigative judge or prosecutor but simply as a fact-finding body that will adhere to a criminal law standard in performing its functions, its creation would seem to be squarely within the powers of the General Assembly. In this respect the IIM is not much different than the several commissions established by the General Assembly-created Human Rights Council to investigate international criminal law violations: Palestine in 2006, Lebanon in 2006, Darfur in 2006, Libya in 2011, Cote d’Ivoire in 2011, Syria in 2012, Eritrea in 2014, DPRK in 2014, and Ethiopia in 2021.¹⁰⁴

Article 10 of the UN Charter gives the General Assembly the power to “discuss” and make “recommendations” concerning “any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the

98. Id.

99. See VIRGINIA MORRIS & MICHAEL P. SCHARF, THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA 83-88 (1998).

100. Id. at 95-97; Prosecutor v. Tadic, Case No. IT-94-1-T, Decision on the Defence Motion on Jurisdiction, ¶ 7 (Int’l Crim. Trib. for the Former Yugoslavia Aug. 10, 1995); Prosecutor v. Tadic, Case No. IT-94-1-T-AR72, Decision on the Defence Motion for Interlocutory Appeal on Jurisdiction, ¶¶ 28-30 (Int’l Crim. Trib. for the Former Yugoslavia Oct. 2, 1995).

101. MORRIS & SCHARF, supra note 99, at 80-81.

102. See Report on Implementation of IIM, supra note 94, ¶¶ 3-4.

103. Id. ¶¶ 11-12, 23, 32; G.A. Res. 71/248, supra note 91.

104. Michael Ramsden & Tomas Hamilton, Uniting Against Impunity: The UN General Assembly as a Catalyst for Action at the ICC, 66 INT’L & COMPAR. L. Q. 893, 897 (2017); see also International Commission of Human Rights Experts on Ethiopia, U.N., <https://www.ohchr.org/en/hr-bodies/hrc/ichre-ethiopa/index> (last visited Oct. 6, 2022) [<https://perma.cc/WGN3-RSG4>].

powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter.”¹⁰⁵ As such, it is within the mandate of the General Assembly to consider questions of threats to peace and security in Syria and whether a referral to the ICC or the establishment of an ad hoc tribunal is warranted. Further, Article 22 of the Charter empowers the General Assembly to “establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.”¹⁰⁶ Therefore, the General Assembly has the authority to establish a “subsidiary organ” to collect and assess the available evidence of international crimes in Syria in order to inform the General Assembly’s discussion and recommendations on these matters.¹⁰⁷ On the other hand, the evidence collected by the IIIM would undeniably not be used solely—or even primarily—for the purpose of the General Assembly’s discussion and recommendations,¹⁰⁸ but it is not clear that additional uses of the information would render the creation of the IIIM beyond the power of the General Assembly.

Whatever the merits of Russia’s legal argument, the establishment of this novel institution by the General Assembly clearly evinces a fundamental power shift away from the Security Council and to the General Assembly caused by the international community’s frustration with the abuse of the veto to prevent action to deal with international atrocities. In providing a legal justification for this power shift, Professor Jennifer Trahan of New York University argues:

[T]he veto power is being abused in a way never anticipated when the Charter was drafted, and in a way that is at odds with other bodies of international law (such as the highest level jus cogens norms) and the “purposes and principles” of the UN Charter, with which the Security Council (including its permanent members) are bound, under article 24.2 of the Charter, to act in accordance.¹⁰⁹

105. U.N. Charter art. 10.

106. U.N. Charter art. 22.

107. Report on Implementation of IIIM, supra note 94, ¶¶ 10-11, 38.

108. See id. ¶¶ 7-8, 35.

109. Jennifer Trahan, The Narrow Case for the Legality of Strikes in Syria and Russia’s Illegitimate Veto, OPINIO JURIS (Apr. 23, 2018), <https://opiniojuris.org/2018/04/23/the-narrow-case-for-the-legality-of-strikes-in-syria-and-russias-illegitimate-veto/> [<https://perma.cc/HSL7-T8MG>]. Trahan argues that there are three ways in which the Russian veto of the proposal to refer the matter of Syria to the International Criminal Court, or to at least establish an international investigative mechanism for Syria was incompatible with the UN Charter. First, the veto power derives from the UN Charter, which is subsidiary to jus cogens norms. Thus, a veto that violates jus cogens norms, or permits the continued violation of jus cogens norms, would be illegal. The Charter (and veto power) must be read in a way that is consistent with jus cogens. Second, the veto power derives from the UN Charter, which states in Article 24(2) that the Security

To some, this extraordinary action by the General Assembly confirmed Larry Johnson's view that the Uniting for Peace Resolution was no longer necessary.¹¹⁰ The power of the General Assembly was ascending without it.

B. Humanitarian Intervention: The Bombing of the Syrian Chemical Weapons Facilities

In its 2001 report on "Responsibility to Protect," the International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty opined that the General Assembly could play an important role in legitimizing force to halt atrocities where the Security Council is prevented from doing so by the veto.¹¹¹ But, fearing a slippery slope in which the Responsibility to Protect principle would be used in conjunction with the Uniting for Peace Resolution to target certain States, such as Israel, the "responsibility to protect" concept as adopted by the Assembly in the 2005 World Summit Outcome resolution does not contemplate the Council "[in] discharging [its] duties . . . shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations." A veto in the face of a credible draft resolution aimed at curtailing or alleviating the commission of genocide, crimes against humanity or war crimes does not accord with the Charter's purposes and principles. And finally, a permanent member of the Security Council that utilizes the veto power also has other treaty obligations, such as those under the Genocide Convention, which contains an obligation to "prevent" genocide. A Permanent Member's use of the veto that would enable genocide, or allow its continued commission, would violate that state's legal obligation to "prevent" genocide. A similar argument can be made as to allowing the perpetration of at least certain war crimes, such as "grave breaches" and violations of Common Article 3 of the 1949 Geneva Conventions. Contra Mohamed Helal, On the Legality of the Russian Vetoes in the UN Security Council and the Harsh Reality of International Law: A Rejoinder to Professor Jennifer Trahan, OPINIO JURIS (May 4, 2018), <http://opiniojuris.org/2018/05/04/on-the-legality-of-the-russian-vetoes-in-the-un-security-council-and-the-harsh-reality-of-international-law-a-rejoinder-to-professor-jennifer-trahan/> [<https://perma.cc/Z5NR-NMLY>].

110. See, e.g., Boris N. Mamlyuk, Uniting for "Peace" in the Second Cold War: A Response to Larry Johnson, 108 AM. J. INT'L L. UNBOUND 129, 130 (2014); Maria Sepúlveda, Overcoming the Veto and Shaping the Security Council: The "United for Peace Resolution" and the "Responsibility to Protect" Doctrine 39 (Feb. 2020) (LLM dissertation, Tilburg University), <http://arno.uvt.nl/show.cgi?fid=151464> [<https://perma.cc/9WVJ-KR7P>]; Stefan Talmon, The Legalizing and Legitimizing Function of UN General Assembly Resolutions, 108 AM. J. INT'L L. UNBOUND 123, 123 (2014); Frederic L. Kirgis, He Got it Almost Right, 108 AM. J. INT'L L. UNBOUND 116, 116 (2014); Henry Richardson, Comment on Larry Johnson, "Uniting for Peace," 108 AM. J. INT'L L. UNBOUND 135, 135 (2014); see generally Johnson, supra note 45.
111. INT'L COMM'N ON INTERVENTION AND STATE SOVEREIGNTY, THE RESPONSIBILITY TO PROTECT 48 (2001).

Assembly recommending that States use coercive force to stop a State from committing atrocity crimes against its own population.¹¹²

This explains why the General Assembly did not invoke the Uniting for Peace Resolution in the context of Syrian use of chemical weapons against the Syrian population in 2013-2018. With the Security Council paralyzed and the General Assembly not perceived as a viable option, on April 14, 2018, the United States, United Kingdom, and France acted on their own in conducting airstrikes against three Syrian chemical weapons facilities.¹¹³ They justified their use of force as necessary to prevent the Assad regime from continuing to use chemical weapons against the Syrian population in the context of Security Council paralysis to establish accountability for this international crime.¹¹⁴ Before the Syrian airstrikes, most countries and experts had taken the position that there was no international law right of humanitarian intervention under customary international law or the UN Charter except when authorized by the UN Security Council.¹¹⁵

This was confirmed in 1999, when Russia blocked the Security Council from authorizing force against Serbia to safeguard Kosovar Albanians in the Serb province of Kosovo from ethnic cleansing, and NATO launched a 78-day bombing campaign against Serbia without Security Council authorization.¹¹⁶ The United States and United Kingdom justified the action as a sui generis act to save hundreds of thousands of lives.¹¹⁷ The UN described it as “unlawful but legitimate.”¹¹⁸ In the years since the 1999 NATO airstrikes, countries have used force for humanitarian purposes without Security Council authorization on several other occasions, including the U.S.-U.K. imposition of a no-fly zone over Iraq to protect the Marsh Arabs from Saddam Hussein’s reprisals,¹¹⁹ the Russian invasion of South Ossetia,

112. G.A. Res. 60/1, at 30, World Summit Outcome (Sept. 16, 2005).

113. Michael P. Scharf, Striking a Grotian Moment: How the Syria Airstrikes Changed International Law Relating to Humanitarian Intervention, 19 CHI. J. INT’L L. 586, 592 (2019).

114. Id.

115. See Michael P. Scharf, How the War on ISIS Changed International Law, 48 CASE W. RES. J. INT’L L. 1, 46, 48 (2016).

116. Scharf, supra note 113, at 597.

117. Madeleine K. Albright, U.S. Sec’y of State, Press Conference Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov (July 26, 1999), <https://1997-2001.state.gov/www/statements/1999/990726b.html>; see also HC Deb (Apr. 26, 1999) (330) col. 22 (including former UK prime minister Tony Blair’s remarks on the NATO Summit).

118. INDEP. INT’L COMM’N ON KOSOVO, THE KOSOVO REPORT: CONFLICT INTERNATIONAL RESPONSE LESSONS LEARNED 4 (2000).

119. HC Deb (Feb. 26, 2001) (363) col. 621.

Georgia ostensibly to protect ethnic Russians living there from attack,¹²⁰ and the U.S. airstrikes against the ISIS terrorist group to save the besieged Yazidis on Mount Sinjar, Iraq.¹²¹ However, never before the April 14, 2018 airstrikes against Syria had humanitarian use of force been accompanied by a clear legal justification based on a right of humanitarian intervention.¹²²

In contrast to the prior cases, the countries participating in the April 2018 airstrikes on Syria embraced a common legal justification – humanitarian intervention – rather than cite only factual considerations that render use of force morally defensible as they had in the past.¹²³ The United Kingdom was the most explicit of the three, telling the Security Council that its actions were legally justified on the basis of “humanitarian intervention” in the context of preventing use of chemical weapons when the Security Council had been paralyzed by a Permanent Member’s veto.¹²⁴ It stated that “[a]ny State is permitted under international law, on an exceptional basis, to take measures in order to alleviate overwhelming humanitarian suffering.”¹²⁵

The United Kingdom’s position was that humanitarian intervention in such cases without Security Council authorization would not violate Article 2(4) of the UN Charter because that provision only prohibits the use of force that is “against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state” and “inconsistent with the Purposes of the

-
120. Brian Barbour & Brian Gorlick, Embracing the ‘Responsibility to Protect’: A Repertoire of Measures Including Asylum for Potential Victims, 20 INT’L J. REFUGEE L. 533, 559 (2008).
121. Helene Cooper & Michael D. Shear, Militants’ Siege on Mountain in Iraq is Over, Pentagon Says, N.Y. TIMES (Aug. 14, 2014), <https://www.nytimes.com/2014/08/14/world/middleeast/iraq-yazidi-refugees.html> [<https://perma.cc/D85F-XLB4>]; Helene Cooper et al., Obama Allows Limited Airstrikes on ISIS, N.Y. TIMES (Aug. 7, 2014) <https://www.nytimes.com/2014/08/08/world/middleeast/obama-weighs-military-strikes-to-aid-trapped-iraqis-officials-say.html> [<https://perma.cc/4P8N-NVTR>].
122. Scharf, supra note 113, at 605; see also April 2018 Airstrikes Against Syrian Chemical-Weapons Facilities, 42 Op. O.L.C. 1, 11 (2018).
123. Scharf, supra note 113, at 605-08.
124. A policy paper issued by the UK Prime Minister’s Office stated: “The UK is permitted under international law, on an exceptional basis, to take measures in order to alleviate overwhelming humanitarian suffering. The legal basis for the use of force is humanitarian intervention” Alonso Gurmendi Dunkelberg et al., Mapping States Reactions to the Syria Strikes of April 2018, JUST SEC. (Apr. 22, 2018), <https://www.justsecurity.org/55157/mapping-states-reactions-syria-strikes-april-2018/> [<https://perma.cc/N3S7-V6JC>].
125. U.N. SCOR, 73rd Sess., 8233d mtg. at 6-7, U.N. Doc. S/PV.8233 (Apr. 14, 2018).

United Nations.”¹²⁶ Humanitarian intervention, the United Kingdom argued, is consistent with the Charter’s Purposes and Principles, which include “maintaining international peace and security,” “promoting and encouraging respect for human rights,” and “sav[ing] succeeding generations from the scourge of war.”¹²⁷ According to the United Kingdom, humanitarian intervention in response to use of chemical weapons is not seeking to threaten the integrity of a state or bring about political change, but only to save lives and enforce the global ban on chemical weapons.¹²⁸ The United Kingdom’s argument would have been strengthened if the General Assembly had authorized the action under the Uniting for Peace Resolution, thereby rendering it a collective action taken by the U.N. rather than by just three States.¹²⁹

For its part, the United States told the Security Council that “[t]he United States is deeply grateful to the United Kingdom and France for their part in the coalition to defend the prohibition of chemical weapons. We worked in lock step: we were in complete agreement” (emphasis added).¹³⁰ As such, the United States can be held to have implicitly adopted the rationale of the United Kingdom.¹³¹ This is particularly significant because the United States has never before recognized a right of humanitarian intervention outside of Security Council authorization under international law.¹³²

Out of a total of seventy states that publicly commented on the airstrikes at the United Nations or elsewhere, only a small handful of countries questioned their legality.¹³³ This suggests that the United Kingdom, France and the United States could have easily garnered the votes of two-thirds the General Assembly to obtain authorization under the Uniting for Peace Resolution if they had decided to go that route.

126. RICHARD WARE, THE LEGAL BASIS FOR AIR STRIKES AGAINST SYRIAN GOVERNMENT TARGETS 7 (2018), <https://researchbriefings.files.parliament.uk/documents/CBP-8287/CBP-8287.pdf>.

127. Id.

128. Id. at 7-8.

129. See Carswell, supra note 61; Nanda, supra note 61.

130. U.N. SCOR, 73rd Sess., 8233d mtg. at 6, U.N. Doc. S/PV.8233 (Apr. 14, 2018).

131. See generally Int’l Law Comm’n, Rep. on the Work of Its Fifty-Third Session, U.N. Doc. A/56/10, at 31-143 (2001), reprinted in [2001] 2 Y.B. Int’l L. Comm’n 31, U.N. Doc. A/CN.4/SER.A/2001/Add.1 (Part 2). These draft articles on the responsibility of states for international wrongful acts cite international cases where a State’s unequivocal acknowledgment and adoption of another’s position renders the State retroactively responsible for it.

132. Scharf, supra note 113, at 604-06, 608.

133. Fifty-six separate states and NATO (consisting of 28 member States) – for a total of over seventy countries – publicly expressed opinions about the April 14, 2018 airstrikes. See Dunkelberg et al., supra note 124.

Moreover, garnering the requisite General Assembly vote would have avoided the possibility of mixed motives and self-interests. As one author has observed, “the most effective safeguard that the developing world has against unilateral misuse of force by those with the military capabilities is by an unbiased U.N. authorization of collective force.”¹³⁴

The implications of the April 2018 airstrikes are far-reaching. Like the creation of the IHIM, the growing recognition of a right of humanitarian intervention without Security Council authorization represents a fundamental power shift from the Security Council – which had historically been viewed as holding the keys to use of force – to coalitions of states who assert a right to act to save lives when the Council is paralyzed.

C. Russia’s 2022 Invasion of Ukraine: Reemergence of the Uniting for Peace Resolution

While the United States had been wary of resorting to the Uniting for Peace Resolution for the past fifty years,¹³⁵ in response to Russia’s invasion of Ukraine in February 2022 the United States dusted off the Resolution and once again put it to use. On February 27, 2022, eleven members of the Security Council voted in favor of the U.S.-sponsored resolution calling for an emergency session of the General Assembly under the Uniting for Peace process; only Russia opposed, while three members abstained (China, India and the United Arab Emirates).¹³⁶ Twenty-four hours later, in an emergency session broadcast live around the world, an overwhelming number of States joined together to express their collective disapprobation of the Russian aggression.¹³⁷

Ukraine’s representative, who introduced the resolution, said that “for almost a week, his country has been fighting missiles and bombs. Half a million people have fled as the Russian Federation tries to deprive his country of the right to exist, carrying out a long list of war crimes.”¹³⁸ The U.S. representative urged countries to vote in favor of

134. Udoh, supra note 46, at 223-24.

135. The last time the United States proposed General Assembly action under the Uniting for Peace Resolution was in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1980. Security Council Deadlocks and Uniting for Peace: An Abridged History, supra note 63.

136. Ukraine: Vote on Draft Humanitarian Resolution, SEC. COUNCIL REP. (Mar. 23, 2022), <https://www.securitycouncilreport.org/whatsinblue/2022/03/ukraine-vote-on-draft-humanitarian-resolution.php> [<https://perma.cc/8JQJ-E8HV>].

137. General Assembly Holds Emergency Special Session on Ukraine, U.N. NEWS (Feb. 28, 2022), <https://news.un.org/en/story/2022/02/1112912> [<https://perma.cc/WE5Q-F2LV>].

138. Press Release, General Assembly, General Assembly Overwhelmingly Adopts Resolution Demanding Russian Federation Immediately End Illegal Use of Force in Ukraine, Withdraw All Troops, U.N. Press Release GA/12407 (Mar. 2, 2022), the Resolution, saying her country “is choosing to stand with the Ukrainian people and will hold the Russian Federation accountable for its actions.”¹³⁹ The representative of the European Union, speaking for the 28 EU States, added that “[t]his is not just about Ukraine, this is not just about Europe, this is about defending an international order based on rules. . . . Today’s historic vote clearly shows the Russian Federation’s isolation from the rest of the international community.”¹⁴⁰

The Special Session resulted in the adoption of Resolution ES-11/1¹⁴¹ by a large majority --141 in favor, five against and 35 abstentions.¹⁴² The Resolution did not go as far as some of the prior Uniting for Peace Resolutions. It did not call for sanctions, peacekeepers, or collective use of force. But it did return to a legal characterization that the General Assembly had long avoided by declaring the Russian invasion to constitute an act of “aggression”¹⁴³ – recognized as a crime under international law.¹⁴⁴ Specifically, the Resolution deplored “in the strongest terms the aggression by the Russian Federation against Ukraine in violation of Article 2 (4) of the Charter” and condemned Russia’s declaration as to the necessity of this “special military operation.”¹⁴⁵

Resolution ES-11/1 further demanded Russia to “cease its use of force against Ukraine” as well as to “immediately, completely and unconditionally withdraw all of its military forces from the territory of Ukraine within its internationally recognized borders.”¹⁴⁶ It also condemned “all violations of international humanitarian law and violations and abuses of human rights,” demanding that parties to the conflict “fully comply with their obligations under international humanitarian law to spare the civilian population.”¹⁴⁷

<https://press.un.org/en/2022/ga12407.doc.htm>
[<https://perma.cc/9CVB-ZA7E>].

139. Id.

140. Id.

141. G.A. Res. ES-11/1, supra note 13.

142. Humeyra Pamuk & Jonathan Landay, U.N. General Assembly in Historic Vote Denounces Russia over Ukraine Invasion, REUTERS, <https://www.reuters.com/world/un-general-assembly-set-censure-russia-over-ukraine-invasion-2022-03-02/> (Mar. 2, 2022, 7:25 PM) [<https://perma.cc/R3AY-BAJ6>].

143. G.A. Res. ES-11/1, supra note 13.

144. See generally Michael Scharf, Universal Jurisdiction and the Crime of Aggression, 53 HARV. INT’L L. J. 358, 358-389 (2012).

145. G.A. Res. ES-11/1, supra note 13, preamble, ¶ 2.

146. Id. ¶¶ 3-4.

147. Id. ¶¶ 11-12.

The finding that Russia committed aggression in Ukraine has already had an effect in the Ukraine v. Russia case,¹⁴⁸ where the International Court of Justice drew upon Resolution ES-11/1 to support the ordering of provisional measures to protect the rights of Ukraine from being subject to the use of force by Russia based upon false allegations of genocide under the Genocide Convention.¹⁴⁹ And it could be of legal relevance in criminal cases in either domestic courts or an ad hoc tribunal prosecuting Russian leaders for the crime of aggression.¹⁵⁰

Resolution ES-11/1 is unlikely to be the General Assembly's final word on the Ukraine situation. Rather, it is anticipated that the resolution will be a door opener to a variety of possible collective actions by the General Assembly as the crisis unfolds in the months and years ahead.¹⁵¹ For example, the General Assembly's finding in Resolution ES-11/1 that the "rights and benefits" of membership¹⁵² entail good faith obligations could provide a foundation for future claims that the Russian government has not acted in accordance with the expectations incumbent on a U.N. member state. While the General Assembly cannot unilaterally suspend Russia from the U.N. through Article 5 of the UN Charter,¹⁵³ it could potentially use that finding to reject Russia's credentials and block Russian diplomats from participating in U.N. bodies. Usually, credentials challenges involve competing government claims to represent the State, but there is precedent for the General Assembly to factor in a regime's adherence to the UN Charter in assessing whether to accept or reject credentials.¹⁵⁴ The credentials of the South African apartheid regime were thus rejected for many years by the General Assembly due to its "flagrant violation" of the UN Charter.¹⁵⁵

148. See Allegations of Genocide under the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Ukr. v. Russ.), Order (Mar. 16, 2022), <https://www.icj-cij.org/public/files/case-related/182/182-20220316-ORD-01-00-EN.pdf> [<https://perma.cc/5PAD-KLAD>].

149. Id. at 16.

150. See generally Scharf, supra note 144.

151. See G.A. Res. ES-11/1, supra note 13.

152. Id. at 1.

153. U.N. Charter art. 5 (requiring a recommendation by the Security Council and the General Assembly's affirmative decision in order to suspend a state).

154. See Catherine Amirfar, Representation of Member States at the United Nations: Recent Challenges, AM. SOC'Y OF INT'L L. INSIGHTS, Aug. 10, 2022, at 4.

155. Raymond Suttner, Has South Africa Been Illegally Excluded from the United Nations General Assembly?, 17 COMPAR. & INT'L L. J. S. AFR. 279, 279, 285 (1984).

Another way in which the General Assembly's determinations might assist the international community's response to Russia's invasion of Ukraine is in supporting the legal justification and coalescing political will for the continuation and strengthening of sanctions against Russia. In response to Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine, the United States, European Union, and several other States have imposed the most comprehensive economic sanctions ever leveled on a major world power.¹⁵⁶ Individual sanctions—including freezing of assets and restrictions on travel—have now been imposed on more than a thousand Russian decision-makers in key political and economic positions.¹⁵⁷ Almost 50 percent of the Russian central bank's foreign exchange reserves have been frozen, and Western banks have been prohibited from undertaking transactions with it,¹⁵⁸ making it extremely difficult for Russia to service debt.¹⁵⁹ Other Russian banks have been removed from the SWIFT system, making international transactions more difficult for Russian companies.¹⁶⁰ Russian airlines have been banned from European and US airspace; their aircrafts are no longer being maintained and they cannot obtain parts.¹⁶¹ In addition, Russian energy and arms companies can no longer receive loans from Western banks.¹⁶² Key technologies for aviation, shipping, and raw material extraction and processing are subject to an export ban.¹⁶³ While Russia has the monetary reserves and revenue from continuing oil and gas exports to fund its military operations, "it may not be able to arm it as easily if sanctions continue."¹⁶⁴ Restrictions on imports of aviation parts and high-tech goods mean that Russia will "have very limited ability to make tanks, missiles . . . and fighter jets."¹⁶⁵

Russia is the world's second-largest exporter of crude oil, accounting for most of its foreign trade.¹⁶⁶ Significantly, the United

156. Stefan Meister & David Jalilvand, Sanctions Against Russia, DGAP (June 8, 2022), <https://dgap.org/en/research/publications/sanctions-against-russia> [<https://perma.cc/JW2X-PNB8>].

157. Id.

158. Id.

159. Id.

160. Id.

161. Id.

162. Meister & Jalilvand, supra note 156.

163. Id.

164. Ashish Valentine, Are Sanctions Actually Hurting Russia's Economy?, NPR (July 1, 2022), <https://www.npr.org/2022/07/01/1109033582/are-sanctions-actually-hurting-russias-economy-heres-what-you-need-to-know> [<https://perma.cc/3SQD-DR4L>].

165. Id.

166. Who Is Still Buying Russian Oil and Gas?, YAHOO! FIN. (July 3, 2022), <https://finance.yahoo.com/news/still-buying-russian-oil-gas->

States and EU States have agreed to ban imports of Russian coal, gas, and petroleum, but with transitional periods for countries that are particularly affected and exemptions for pipeline deliveries.¹⁶⁷ Despite these sanctions, Russia exported $97.7 billion worth of fossil fuels in the first 100 days since its invasion of Ukraine, at an average of $977 million per day.¹⁶⁸ A significant amount of Russian oil, gas, and coal went to China, India, Turkey, Japan, South Korea, and Egypt, which have not imposed bans on Russian oil.¹⁶⁹ Through these exports, Russia is keeping its economy afloat.¹⁷⁰ This demonstrates an axiom of trade sanctions – they don’t work well unless they are applied universally, as they were against Iran in the early 2000s.¹⁷¹

The General Assembly has used the Uniting for Peace Resolution in the past to call upon members to impose diplomatic sanctions and trade embargoes as a countermeasure to induce compliance with international law by a law-breaking State.¹⁷² For States questioning the legitimacy of such sanctions, the General Assembly could play a useful role certifying that the conditions for the valid invocation of the law of countermeasures under Article 49 of the International Law Commission’s Draft Articles on State Responsibility (proportionality, proper purpose, and temporal limitation) have been met.¹⁷³

Finally, in collaboration with Ukraine, acting under the Uniting for Peace Resolution, the General Assembly could establish a “hybrid

150000467.html?guccounter=1&guce_referrer=aHR0cHM6Ly93d3cuYmluZy5jb20v&guce_referrer_sig=AQAAALc7hUsjHpvOb5KwAGqLOwUv a0-dkNhMLbR7aYK1VDnT-UWIsY3loBUR1CXjcM0FQuWCXg8gf3cm RA1ozywINtPodl4C1eDpLFpfd5TlBjX0Aakrmlunx5a9sgGVSIMS74IiE Zyfcq-Fnp-zemUNpg9K6L8mvfP8TrKq2D1z4ES
[https://perma.cc/XUY3-MV5F].

167. Meister & Jalilvand, supra note 156.

168. Who Is Still Buying Russian Oil and Gas?, supra note 166; Niccolo Conte, Who’s Still Buying Fossil Fuels from Russia?, VC ELEMENTS (June 22, 2022), <https://elements.visualcapitalist.com/importers-of-russian-fossil-fuels/> [https://perma.cc/XUY3-MV5F].

169. Conte, supra note 168.

170. Who Is Still Buying Russian Oil and Gas?, supra note 166.

171. Zachary Laub, Sanctions on Iran, COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELS., <https://www.cfr.org/background/international-sanctions-iran> (July 15, 2015, 8:00 AM) [https://perma.cc/5LCZ-YZLC].

172. Johnson, supra note 45.

173. See Int’l Law Comm’n, supra note 131, at 129-131; Michael Ramsden, Uniting for Peace: The Emergency Special Session on Ukraine, HARV. INT’L L. J. ONLINE (Apr. 2022), <https://harvardilj.org/2022/04/uniting-for-peace-the-emergency-special-session-on-ukraine/> [https://perma.cc/44J9-9TF2].

tribunal¹⁷⁴ to prosecute the Crime of Aggression. Such a court has been proposed by a number of experts and organizations.¹⁷⁵ The International Criminal Court can prosecute war crimes, crimes against humanity, and genocide committed by Russian nationals in Ukraine because the Ukraine government lodged a declaration accepting the Court's jurisdiction over such crimes since 2013.¹⁷⁶ But a separate international tribunal is needed because the International Criminal Court does not have jurisdiction over Russian aggression under the terms of the 2010 Kampala Aggression Amendment to the ICC Statute.¹⁷⁷ Moreover, although Ukraine has a criminal statute granting Ukraine courts jurisdiction over the Crime of Aggression,¹⁷⁸ Ukraine would not be able

-
174. See Office of the U.N. High Comm'r for Hum. Rts., Rule-of-Law Tools for Post-Conflict States: Maximizing the Legacy of Hybrid Courts, 1-6, U.N. Doc. HR/PUB/08/2 (2008).
175. On April 28, 2022, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE) adopted a resolution proposing the establishment of an ad-hoc international tribunal investigate and prosecute the crimes of Russia's military aggression in Ukraine. PACE calls for an Ad Hoc International Criminal Tribunal to Hold to Account Perpetrators of the Crime of Aggression Against Ukraine, COUNCIL OF EUR. (Apr. 28, 2022), <https://www.coe.int/en/web/portal/-/pace-calls-for-an-ad-hoc-international-criminal-tribunal-to-investigate-war-crimes-in-ukraine> [<https://perma.cc/C76A-RZHJ>]; Jennifer Trahan, U.N. General Assembly Should Recommend Creation of Crime of Aggression Tribunal For Ukraine: Nuremberg Is Not the Model, JUST SEC. (Mar. 7, 2022), <https://www.justsecurity.org/80545/u-ngeneral-assembly-should-recommend-creation-of-crime-of-aggression-tribunal-for-ukraine-nuremberg-is-not-the-model/> [<https://perma.cc/N842-FW6U>].
176. See Letter from the Embassy of Ukr. in the Kingdom of the Neth. to the Registrar of the Int'l Crim. Ct. (Apr. 9, 2014), <https://www.icc-cpi.int/sites/default/files/itemsDocuments/997/declarationRecognitionJurisdiction09-04-2014.pdf> [<https://perma.cc/5S8A-5GVC>]; Letter from Pavlo Klimkin, Minister for Foreign Affs. of Ukr., to Herman von Hebel, Registrar of the Int'l Crim. Ct. (Sept. 8, 2015), https://www.icc-cpi.int/sites/default/files/iccdocs/other/Ukraine_Art_12-3_declaration_08092015.pdf [<https://perma.cc/QLF3-KQN3>].
177. See Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, arts. 8, 15, Jul. 17, 1998, 2187 U.N.T.S. 90. Since Russia is not a party to the ICC Statute and has not accepted the Aggression Amendment, Russian nationals cannot be prosecuted by the ICC for the Crime of Aggression unless the Security Council referred the case.
178. Article 437 of the Ukrainian Criminal Code states that (1) "planning, preparation or waging of an aggressive war or armed conflict, or conspiring for any such purposes, - shall be punishable by imprisonment for a term of seven to twelve years" and (2) "conducting an aggressive war or aggressive military operations, - shall be punishable by imprisonment for a term of ten to fifteen years." Criminal Code of Ukraine, ch. 20, art. 437 (2001).

to prosecute the top Russian leaders because of the doctrine of Head of State Immunity, which does not apply to international courts.¹⁷⁹

As discussed above, the General Assembly's powers are limited to making recommendations, as confirmed by the International Court of Justice in the Certain Expenses case and the General Assembly lacks the ability to take enforcement action, which is the exclusive prerogative of the Security Council.¹⁸⁰ As the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia's Appeals Chamber made clear in the Tadić case, the establishment of a criminal tribunal is a form of such coercive or enforcement action.¹⁸¹ But the General Assembly's past practice has indicated a way around those limitations. The General Assembly can support an exercise of criminal jurisdiction possessed by one or more UN Member States. The foremost example is the GA's creation of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia. In the case of the ECCC, the General Assembly introduced a resolution recommending the UN Secretary General to enter into a bilateral agreement with the Government of Cambodia for establishing a criminal tribunal¹⁸² and subsequently, the resolution establishing the ECCC was approved by the General Assembly.¹⁸³

IV. CONCLUSION

The Security Council and General Assembly's resort to the Uniting for Peace mechanism for the first time since 1982 reflects the failure of the Security Council to fulfill its responsibility to respond to threats to international peace and security in the context of a major world crisis. With the Security Council paralyzed once again by the veto during a new Cold War, institutional power has shifted to the General Assembly.

The United States conceived the Uniting for Peace mechanism during the Korean War to end-run the Soviet veto and supported its 179. Case Concerning the Arrest Warrant of 11 April 2000 (Dem. Rep. Congo v. Belg.), Judgment, 2002 I.C.J. 3, 9 (Feb. 14).

180. Certain Expenses of the United Nations (Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter), Advisory Opinion, 1962 I.C.J. 151, 165 (July 20).

181. Prosecutor v. Tadic, Case No. IT-94-1-I, Decision on Defence Motion for Interlocutory Appeal on Jurisdiction, ¶ 37-40, 44 (Int'l Crim. Trib. for the Former Yugoslavia Oct. 2, 1995). Since the ICTY was created under Article 41 of the Charter by the Security Council, the passage is dicta as applied to the General Assembly creation of a Tribunal. Professor Michael Ramsden has argued that the General Assembly would have the implied power to create such a tribunal under Article 22 of the UN Charter. See Ramsden, supra note 44.

182. Agreement Concerning the Prosecution Under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed During the Period of Democratic Kampuchea, Cambodia-U.S., June 6, 2003, 2329 U.N.T.S. 117.

183. G.A. Res. 57/228 (May 13, 2003).

use for several decades thereafter. But after the Uniting for Peace mechanism began to be used as a way to sanction Israel notwithstanding U.S. vetoes at the Security Council, the United States concluded that the mechanism should be relegated to the dustpan of history, where it remained unused for 30 years.¹⁸⁴ The dawn of a new Cold War, sparked by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, changed that calculus. In resorting to the Uniting for Peace mechanism in 2022, the United States had little to lose because the General Assembly, through diplomatic practice and International Court of Justice decisions, had slowly amassed the power to act on matters of which the Security Council was seized. This amassed power allowed the General Assembly to recommend imposition of sanctions, and to create investigative bodies and hybrid tribunals without invoking the Uniting for Peace resolution.

The foundation of the Uniting for Peace Resolution imbued Resolution ES-11/1 with tremendous symbolic value, and the Resolution's determination that Russia had committed an unprovoked act of aggression had an immediate impact on the Russia-Ukraine International Court of Justice case and has set the stage for subsequent actions by the General Assembly. These might include a credentials challenge to suspend the Russian delegation from participation at the United Nations, endorsement of diplomatic and economic sanctions, and the creation of a hybrid tribunal to prosecute Russian leaders for the crime of aggression.

In the months since this article was drafted, the General Assembly has resorted to the "Uniting for Peace" mechanism to convene four subsequent Special Sessions at which it adopted resolutions in response to the evolving situation in Ukraine. On March 24, 2022, it adopted a resolution on the humanitarian consequences of aggression against Ukraine.¹⁸⁵ On April 7, 2022, it adopted a resolution suspending the rights of membership of Russia in the Human Rights Council.¹⁸⁶ On October 12, 2022, it adopted a resolution rejecting the sham plebiscites and illegal Russian annexation of territory in Eastern Ukraine.¹⁸⁷ And on November 14, 2022, it adopted a resolution establishing a claims register in The Hague to compile state and individual compensation claims against Russia related to the war in Ukraine.¹⁸⁸

184. See supra text accompanying note 112.

185. G.A. Res. ES-11/2 (Mar. 24, 2022) (adopted by a vote of 140 in favor, 5 against, 38 abstentions).

186. G.A. Res. ES-11/3 (Apr. 7, 2022) (adopted by a vote of 93 in favor, 24 against, 58 abstentions).

187. G.A. Res. ES-11/4 (Oct. 12, 2022) (adopted by a vote of 143 in favor, 5 against, 35 abstentions).

188. Chiara Giorgetti et al., Historic UNGA Resolution Calls for Ukraine Reparations, JUST SEC. (Nov. 16, 2022), <https://www.justsecurity.org/8>

Recognizing that none of these resolutions have yet taken the more significant steps discussed in this article, this analysis would not be complete without recognizing the significant political challenges that stand in the way of taking such action. While using the Uniting for Peace mechanism for condemnation and warning may pose limited risk, employing it for more significant action carries greater peril. If the Security Council veto was a necessary compromise to get major powers to join the U.N. in 1945, incapacitating the veto power in this way may risk their withdrawal, and even the destruction of the United Nations altogether.

While this counsels for restraint, in the context of the Ukraine crisis, the political winds can change quickly reflecting the evolving situation on the ground. A major atrocity, or Russian use of chemical or tactical nuclear weapons, for example, would dramatically alter the diplomatic terrain. In such case, the Uniting for Peace mechanism, now as in 1950, may play a historic role.