FROM THE EDITORS

The June 1963 issue of the Review will mark the introduction of a new section devoted to letter-type contributions from our readers. The purpose of this new section will be to encourage the expression of legal ideas without the necessity of preparing a full length article.

This new feature will resemble the letter-to-the-editor section of leading newspapers and magazines. Thus if the reader wishes to propose a new legal concept — possibly the germ for legislation — or if he wishes to take issue with the conclusions reached in an article published in this or another legal periodical, this new section will provide an outlet for such ideas and comments.

You are encouraged to submit your letter to the Review. Careful consideration will be given to each contribution, and those letters which show careful thought will be published. All editorial communications should be directed to the Editor-in-Chief, Western Reserve Law Review, School of Law, Western Reserve University, Cleveland 6, Ohio.

EDITORS' PREFACE

This issue of the Review presents a symposium of articles exploring specific problems arising under the Uniform Commercial Code, with particular reference to the Ohio version of the Code. The contributing authors have achieved prominence in the area of commercial law and possess a unique expertise in regard to the Uniform Commercial Code. Thus their analysis offers unusual insight into this relatively new area of commercial law.

Throughout the following symposium reference is made to "UCC." Unless otherwise indicated these initials refer to the 1958 Official Text of the Uniform Commercial Code, the edition of the Code's joint sponsors, the American Law Institute and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.
